Hospice Care available to veterans

Hospice of the Bluegrass, Inc. and the Nicholas County Veterans Coalition sponsored a dinner for all Veterans this past Thursday at the Nicholas County Elementary School Cafeteria. Over 75 were in attendance.

With the realization that veterans residing in rural communities may not be aware of available resources, over the past two months, Hospice has met with coalition members to help establish linkage between veterans and available services.

One of the primary goals was to inform veterans in Nicholas County about end-of-life services available to veterans in local communities. One of these is Hospice/Palliative Care. Veterans deserve to know that when the end of their life is approaching, that hospice care is available, both at nursing homes and in-home.

Many veterans do not learn about this benefit until it is too late to take full advantage of it and state they wish they had known about it sooner.

Hospice and palliative care refer to the time in life when medical means of seeking cures have been exhausted and the end of life is imminent. This care is normally provided during the last six months of life.

This benefit is free of charge. It was already paid for by the individual's service to their country.

If you know of a Veteran who is facing this situation, or who may face it soon, please contact Hospice of the Bluegrass at (859) 234-6462 or (800) 756-6005.

Radio station to cover games

Thanks to the efforts of local radio station 90.7 FM "The Wind" - WPTJ ("Winning People To Jesus") those who aren't able to attend Nicholas County High School football games will still be able to receive play-by-play coverage for some of the contests.

Owls in the park

This summer a dead tree was cut down in the Millersburg park and a momma owl flew out. Four of five babies followed.

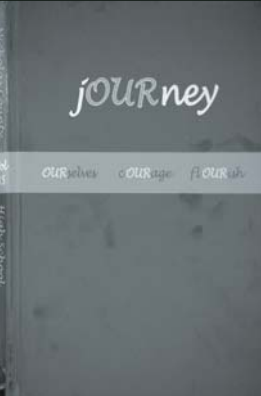

Mr. Barker and Ms Marie Livingood rescued the birds and called the animal control folks to see what needed to be done. The birds eventually ended up with Raptor Rehabilitation of Kentucky, or RROKI.

Robert Barker, of ART-CROFT called a number of Millersburg residents to let them know that the owls would be released back into the wild at 9 p.m. this past Monday.

A RROKI rep brought the birds back to the City park on Monday evening to release them back in their own habitat.

Dr. Marlo Anderson, DVM, DACVECC, a RROKI volunteer, brought the four baby owls "home."

Nearly a dozen individuals gathered to witness the release, which all felt was an exciting experience.

Yearbooks are here!

The long-awaited yearbooks have finally arrived and are ready for pick-up.

See Ms. Swartz at the Library to receive your copy.

Chautauqua Days in Millersburg

Millersburg celebrated its annual Chautauqua festival in the city park from Sept. 17 - 19. Most people we spoke with felt the baby contest was the best part of the event.
